Welcome to the University of Cambridge, Colleges and museums

Cambridge is a beautiful city, recognised throughout the world as a place of learning and innovation. With spectacular architecture, inspiring culture and refreshing green spaces, you can learn about the heritage and contemporary life of the University, Colleges, museums and the city during your visit.

The Colleges of Cambridge have existed for more than 800 years and were founded between the 13th and 20th centuries. There are 31 Colleges. The oldest College – Peterhouse – was established as a community of scholars in 1284; the most recent foundation, Robinson College, was in 1979. The other 29 Colleges span the intervening centuries, and were founded by royalty, religious orders, guilds, business people, and the City of Cambridge. Over the years, each has acquired its own rich history of traditions and individual atmosphere.

The Colleges are autonomous, self-governing communities where students and academics live, work, learn and socialise. Three Colleges are for women students only and two admit only postgraduates. Four admit only mature undergraduates (over 21) and postgraduates. The remainder house and teach anyone enrolled in a course of study or research at the University. Once a student is a member of College, they remain so for life.

A student's College plays a central part in his or her experience here. It is in the College that the student receives supervisions – individual and small group teaching – which complement the lectures and practical classes organised by the University. Colleges accommodate and feed their students. Formerly, College life revolved around the three great communal areas – the Chapel, the Library and the dining Hall. Today Colleges also provide bars, sports facilities and extensive opportunities for music, theatre and cultural life.

The museums and collections include the Fitzwilliam Museum, Botanic Garden, Kettle's Yard, Sedgwick Museum of Earth Sciences, The Polar Museum, Whipple Museum of the History of Science, Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, Museum of Zoology, Museum of Classical Archaeology and the University Library visitor centre.

Did you know?

Cambridge has more museums, galleries and collections within a square mile than any other UK city outside London.

Museums may be closed for Christmas or public holidays. Check website for details.

The information contained within this leaflet is for guidance only. The Colleges are private institutions and opening times may vary due to functions, conferences, holidays, etc. During the examination period (late April–mid June) the Colleges will be shut. Charges are also subject to change. Please check with the College you wish to visit in advance.

Groups should book in advance and the Visit Cambridge website offers official walking tours visiting several Colleges. All visitors should first report to the porters' lodge at the entrance to the College on arrival.

Please remember that the Colleges are places where people study, work and live and we ask that you do not enter any areas marked 'private'. Members of the University will be asked for their University card to visit Colleges.

Alumni should request a CamCard for College access (www.alumni.cam.ac.uk/benefits/camcard/college-access).

April–June is quiet exam period, during which most of the Colleges are closed
